

You Know You're A Foster Parent When...

When your head hits the pillow at night, you giggle.

You have yearly subscriptions to Sesame Street, TV Guide, Handyman and Parenting with quarterly updates.

"The check is in the mail" is said more often from Social Services than to the Electric Company.

Your personal stash of childrens' clothes rivals that of the local Good Will office.

The nurse at the doctor's office smiles, welcomes you by first name and goes on a 3 hour coffee break.

You have 3 beautiful daughters, all named Heather.

Light switches, toilet handles and door knobs last one year or less in your house.

Your childrens' teachers have your number on speed dial.

Going to therapists with your kids starts to feel "good."
